Grey Literature—

Literature not published by traditional or commercial publishers is termed grey literature. It can add important information to your literature search. However, it may not have gone through a rigorous review process so check quality and bias,

You won't necessarily find grey literature via our Library databases. Here's tips on how to find theses and government reports/policies:

Dissertations and theses

- NZ Research—search for dissertations/theses/research

Government documents

- Use Google advanced search (click on Tools in a Google search). Type "govt.nz" in the "site or domain search box. . specify the "site or domain" to limit the search to NZ government websites
- Ministry of Health – Manatū Hauora—search for policies and publications

Other grey literature

- Check your tertiary education website for more information on finding grey literature.

Bringing the voices of Māori to the fore

A study recently published in the New Zealand Medical Journal explored Māori experiences and perspectives of hospital treatment in the context of acute care.

The key needs highlighted by the small group of participants were "... the importance of whanaungatanga in building trusting relationships with patients and whānau; creating safe spaces for patients and whānau; improved staff cultural safety; exploring individual patient and whānau needs, avoiding assumptions about cultural requirements or stereotypical characteristics; upholding the mana of all patients with respectful interactions; and empowering Māori as partners in their care."

"Why I was having to be admitted to hospital, how long I possibly [had] to stay for, why they were taking my bloods as I had no clue."

Embracing Gen AI at Work

"Times have changed. My colleagues and I now have gen AI built into our email, word processing software, and web browsers. We're encouraged to use it for core daily tasks. What once felt like cheating is now a way to be more productive"

Harvard Business Review editorial—"I Had Help Writing This.", Sept/Oct 2024.

"Generative artificial intelligence is expected to radically transform all kinds of jobs over the next few years. No longer the exclusive purview of technologists, AI can now be put to work by nearly anyone, using commands in everyday language instead of code..."

Request the Harvard Business Review article "Embracing Gen AI at work. The skills you need to succeed in the era of large language models"

Learning to Delegate

"You can't do everything on your own — nor should you."

Request the article, "Learning to delegate as a first time manager" to discover the steps to work through to effectively delegate.

More on leadership—Request the article "3 Ways to Compassionately Hold Your Team Accountable".

This article explores the "two types of accountability: punitive accountability, which involves reprimanding people for mistakes, and growth-oriented accountability " and three habits to develop to build accountability.
